The Company aims to establish and maintain an investor relations program that will keep stockholders informed of the important developments in the Company and ensures them that the Company values their investment. Accuracy, transparency, and timelessness are the core principles that guide the Company's Investor Relations Program.

The Company sends notices of meeting via personal delivery, courier or direct mail to its stockholders. Updates on the Company's activities and other periodic reports to regulatory bodies are posted to the Company website.

In all of its transactions, particularly in extraordinary matters such as mergers and sales of substantial corporate assets, the Company ensures that it obtains the terms and conditions most beneficial to the corporation and maximizes shareholder value. The Company conducts due diligence in assessing the transaction and engages the services of consultants, legal counsel or independent auditors. The findings and recommendations of these experts are taken into account by the Board in making decisions and the corresponding approvals of the stockholders, in cases where the law prescribes that approval be obtained, are sought.
